Kristen Stewart then highlights or lowlights are what you need to ask your stylist for.

HIGHLIGHTS AND LOWLIGHTS TECHNIQUE: Lowlights and highlights are essentially partial coloring techniques, adding a different shade to certain strands of hair so your hair ends up having depth, texture and various complementary hues.

The technique used differs from block color hair dyeing and involves sectioning off the hair to target the parts you want transformed. This way you can have a multi-hued more natural looking finish. Celebs like Jennifer Aniston and Jennifer Lawrence are great ambassadors for highlights and lowlights as their hair is always full of light and dark accents which adds body, movement and interest to their lush locks.

To achieve highlights we will use a paste usually containing a bleaching agent and peroxide. We then apply it to the hair using a special brush and either foils (strips of foil or plastic used to separate strands of hair from the rest) or saran wrap for a balayage affect.

Unlike a full hair color (usually called permanent or semi-permanent dyeing) you can choose to have a full-head or half-head of highlights. This means you can simply have the top of your hair dyed leaving the underneath natural – although if you wear your hair up a lot, then this doesn't look great. You can also have a T-section or infills done to maintain the look as your roots begin to show. This means only a small section of the roots on the top of your head are re-dyed. We are a L'Oreal Professionnel Hair Salon in NYC!

WHY HAVE HIGHLIGHTS OR LOWLIGHTS? Highlights or lowlights are perfect if you want to give your hair a bit of a color boost, they're also a great way to start off dyeing your hair for the first time as you retain some of your natural shade too.

They allow you to have a sun-kissed effect with lighter strands running through your hair in a just-back-from-holiday hue. They're also great for lighting up the face; illuminating and injecting life into your hair's color can work wonders for your skin tone! It's advised to have them done before the summer to prevent the color changing after exposure to the sun.

Note that lowlights and highlights aren't the same as streaks, which can be also done with saran wrap or foil. Streaks have a larger, more blocky effect on the hair than lowlights and highlights and are much more noticeable – the benefit of highlights and lowlights is that they have a really natural finish.

LOWLIGHTS VS. HIGHLIGHTS: Lowlights involve darkening strands of hair by using colors that are darker than your natural color. In contrast, highlights use colors that are lighter than your natural shade.

WHO CAN CONSIDER HIGHLIGHTS AND LOWLIGHTS? People with all hair types can have lowlights and highlights, whether it's straight, curly or frizzy. On curls, this technique gives more depth and on the straightest of hair, it gives the illusion of more volume.

It's true that blonde lowlights and highlights are a big trend but more chocolatey tones are also very popular – think Kristen Stewart or Mila Kunis.

As well as the classic lowlight/highlight technique, there are variations to play with too. “Dip-dye” AKA “Ombre” hair color, which involves lowlights on the roots and highlights on the ends, is one trend that keeps on going – and is a fun way to play with color – just check out Olivia Palermo!
